CONVERSATIONS

David Abankwah

While they were talking and debating these things, Jesus himself approached and began to accompany them.

-Luke 24:15 | NET

After Jesus Christ died, there was a lot of rumours about the death of the Messiah in town. People who liked Him especially His followers, were saying all sorts of good things about Him, not taking away the mighty works of teaching, preaching and healing from their speech. Others who disliked Him, especially the Chief Priests, Pharisees and the scribes also passed bad news around after His resurrection. Not all condolences are genuine. There are some people who wish we never lived.

Among all the talks in town, there were two people who were walking towards a town called Emmaus. These people were busy talking about Jesus Christ. Can you imagine that, they only talked about Him for the seven-mile journey they embarked on foot? They were also sad for the loss of their only hope for Israel as they showed passion behind their conversation. They weren't gossipers who were having a good time talking about someone, rather, they were true sympathizers of the death of the Messiah.

As they were talking about the Messiah, Jesus Christ showed up. He disguised Himself into a different person. He also joined the conversation and fueled it up by His inclusion. Then when they finally arrived in Emmaus, He had communion with them and after that, He revealed His true self. Jesus Christ appearance in the midst of these people, confirms that, where two or three meets in His name, He is also there (Matthew 18:20). He demonstrated that, there is a third invisible person who is behind every conversation we have.

Anytime people converse about money, the spirit of mammon appears to fuel the conversation, by stirring the love for money among them. Anytime you converse about sex, the spirit of lust appears in your midst to arouse your feelings towards fornication and adultery. Anytime people converse about God, the Holy Spirit will also be there in their midst to fellowship with them. There is always an invisible third person behind your conversations, so watch out!
